"By that one declaration unwittingly uttered no doubt the gentleman from lows answers completely all the Republican speeches, editorials and essays as to how the high tariff helps the farmers."

Mr. Clark gave statistics showing the enormous corn cops annually produced in the United States, the large exportation of this cereal and the insignificant importation of the same.

"And yet," he remarked, "farmers are expected to whoop it up for the Republican candidates, because they are protected by the tariff from foreign corn raisers."

Mr. Hepburn's claim that the price of steel rails had been reduced in the United States from this a ton, under the Walker wriff, to E4 a ton now, through an industry built up by a Republican tariff and American ingenuity, was an assertion, said dustry built up by a Republicen tariff and American higenuity, was an assertion, said Mr. Clark, which might satisfy Republican members of Congress, but would not deceive any intelligent man eisewhere, as the cause of this reduction in the price of steel was the discovery of the Bessemer process of manufacture. He added: "Even Colonel Hepburn, with his discostion to claim everything for the protective tariff, will not claim that it was responsible for fir Henry Bessemer, or for his process of making cheap steel."

RECIPROCITY IDEAS.

The reciprocity speech of Representative Balzell, delivered in the House recently, received considerable attention from Mr. Clark. The keynote of that speech, he declared to be this sentence: "Republican reciprocity is reciprocity in noncompeting articles, and in nothing else."

pressed by Fresident McKinley at Buffalo in these words: "We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing."

President Roosevelt had indersed this McKinley idea of reciprocity. Mr. Chark asserted, by sending to the Senate an extension of time for the ranification of the reciprocity treaty negotiated with France under the direction of President McKinley. This treaty contained scores and scores of articles produced in France and Algeria, and also in the United States, on which a reduction of the tariff was provided for.

Judge De Armond was speaking in answer to Republican argument which had explained the failure to act on the ground that the rules of the House put a resolution demanding an investigation out of order, when the Post Office supply bill was under consideration.

"The proposition is plainly that an investigation has been prevented by the rules of this House. It is a matter of congratulation that this side of the House has shown a better regard for law and right. We have done out best."

Rather than interfere with the consideration of appropriation bills, the Democrats of the Senate have resolved to postpone their demand for a congressional investigation of the Post-Office Department until after the general appropriation bill for the support of the department has been disposed of.

The request for the adoption of one of the resolutions providing for the investigation of the department, now pending before the Committee on Post Offices, was urged again by them at the meeting of the committee this morning and the Republicans again voted down the motion of DELANTE DISCUSSES PENSION ORDER.
